GOOD MORNING

As we talk this morning about the dangers of gaps between the generations, I thought it might be appropriate to share an illustration I wrote about a few years ago. A boy wanted to know if anyone could see God. The boy, being rather young, thought it would be a good idea to ask his older sister. "Susie can anybody ever really see God?" he asked. Susie quickly replied: "No, of course not, silly. God is so far up in heaven that nobody can see him."

Not quite satisfied with the answer, he decided to ask his mother. "Mom, can anybody ever really see God?" "No, not really," she gently said. "God is a spirit, and he dwells in our hearts, but we can never really see him."

Somewhat satisfied but still wondering, the youngster went on his way. Not long afterwards, his grandfather took the little boy on a fishing trip. They were having a great time together. At the end of the day the sun was beginning to set. The sight was so beautiful that the grandfather stopped fishing and stared at the amazing colors that filled the sky. On seeing the peace and contentment of his grandfather while he watched the ending of the day, the little boy thought for a moment and finally spoke hesitatingly: "Granddad, I wasn't going to ask anybody else, but I wonder if you can tell me the answer to something I've been wondering about a long time. Can anybody ever really see God?"

The old man did not even turn his head. A long moment slipped by before he finally answered. "Son," he quietly said. "It's getting so I can't see anything else."

"The heavens declare the glory of God; the skies proclaim the work of His hands. Day after day they pour forth speech; night after night they display knowledge. There is no speech or language where their voice is not heard. Their voice goes out into all the earth, their words to the ends of the world." Psalm 19:1-4
