HONORING ONE ANOTHER ABOVE OURSELVES

Showing honor to our brothers and sisters in Christ takes on many faces. It can express itself in many different ways. One expression of honoring and valuing our Christian family is through showing respect and affirmation. We are created in such a way that we function better when we are the recipients of occasional acts of loving respect and honest affirmation.

But honoring other human beings goes beyond the realm of the body of Christ. The agape love that we choose to show for our Christian family is the same agape love that we are to show for our neighbors, that is for all human beings. We have the opportunity to show this kind of dignity, respect and love for all people, even those who differ from us. And we don't have to look far to find people who are as different to us as we are to them! I am talking about differences like race, religion, culture or background. All of these things can build walls of separation between us. By respecting those who differ from us and by valuing them as God's creation, we begin to build bridges that enable us to travel between those differences. These bridges often connect us and provide opportunity for exchange and encounter. By slowly opening these doors, by building these bridges, we lay down avenues for showing what is really important in life, what is most precious to us, the good news about Jesus Christ. After all, he is the savior of all mankind!

"Be devoted to one another in love. Honor one another above yourselves." Romans 12:1
