ASKING HONEST QUESTIONS, SEEKING BIBLICAL ANSWERS

One of the biggest challenges for a preacher is to keep his finger on the pulse of the congregation that he serves. Weekly sermons are prepared with the congregation and her needs in mind. Sunday mornings, our sermons have typically been prepared to parallel what we are studying in our adult Bible classes. This is intended to strengthen our grasp on the texts as well as to give a more practical look at what we have already looked at in Bible class. As you know, we have been looking at Romans for several weeks now. I hope to continue with this.

Sunday evenings have been a bit different. We have looked at topics from the Old Testament as well as general topics that needed to be talked about. From time to time, we have opened up Sunday evening for the study of specific biblical questions that you might have. We have entitled this series, "Asking honest questions, seeking biblical answers."

Anyone who has experience reading and studying the Bible has come across texts or topics that can be baffling. There are often questions that arise. We hope to be able to look at some of those questions beginning in March. As a preacher, I have to ask a couple things of you: first, please understand that I will never have answers for all the questions that might come up! Secondly, make sure the questions are honest questions that you have about scripture. Thirdly, let's not make this an attempt to "stump the preacher"! If that is the goal, you won't have to try very hard!

Beginning this Sunday, there will be a blue box in the back. Next to the box will be a stack of cards on which you can write your questions. Please understand that I will only be able to choose 8 topics this time around. This will take us into May.

I am looking forward to sharing with all of you during this special study! Let's be sure and take part!
